Salling Dam Work Starts, Slow Drawdown Expected

Construction has started on a temporary spillway next to the Salling Dam and is expected to be finished in two weeks. The temporary spillway will allow the DNR to slowly draw down the water behind the dam.

"The drawdown will take at least a year, possibly longer," said Jerry Casey, of the DNR Grayling field office. He said the temporary spillway will have removable boards allowing the DNR to carefully lower the water level inches at a time.

"The property owners upstream will not see a lot of change in the water level until late summer or fall," said Steve Sendek, of the DNR Grayling field office.

In addition to constructing the spillway, Posson Construction, with subcontractor Brad Coulter Excavating of Grayling, will be installing a sediment trap in front of the spillway and a silt fence behind. Casey said a slow drawdown of the water will allow the traps to catch a lot of the silt backed up behind the old dam. He said construction of the spillway will be tricky because of the care needed to avoid erosion on the steep banks.

The AuSable River behind the dam (also called Salling Lake) is about 12 feet deep in places. The goal of the DNR is to restore the stream to the way it appears near Pollack Bridge, about 15-20 feet wide and clear-running. The spillway would be free of any obstruction and vegetation would

River House Helping Children Affected By Domestic Violence

By Barb Sands, Community Education Coordinator

The Crawford County group... has the largest attendance with as many as 24 children at one session.

"Karen" sits down at the kitchen table and nibbles absently at her cold hamburger and french fries. It's been a very long evening but now the little ones are fed and tucked in for the night, even "little Jimmy" who usually cries and fusses for at least half an hour before falling asleep. Karen is tired, but she still has time to clean up the kitchen and do her homework before it's time for her to go to sleep.

"Karen" is only ten years old. At an age where other little girls are playing with Barbie dolls or giggling at sleepovers at friends' homes, Karen's self esteem comes from being a "Junior Mom" because her mom is "just too tired to think or care anymore."

Children like "Karen" are the reason why River House Shelter began a Children's Program in 1987. After the safe home opened, volunteers began to notice that the children needed more than just babysitters while they stayed in shelter. The children were reenacting the violence they saw in their homes and having frequent temper tantrums; they were showing signs of eating and sleeping disorders; and like "Karen," they were suffering from adult/child role reversal. A high percentage of children were also incest or sexual assault victims.

The River House Volunteers began to provide weekly support group meetings for the children while the adults met in a separate location. The staff began to see positive results and River House hired a Children's Advocate to develop the program further.

The River House Children's program is designed to encourage the children to express their feelings in a positive manner as well as to teach the children alternatives to violent behavior. Children's services provided include domestic violence counseling (including support groups in all four counties River House serves), advocacy and referrals, and special activities such as crafts or field trips. The Children's Advocate also provides educational programs including information about good touch/bad touch, health related subjects, and a teen program on dating violence and date rape.

In order to provide the best services possible for the children, the Advocate works closely with the local schools, Protective Services, Community Mental Health, and other agencies both directly and through attendance at

Commissioners Question Lehman Work-Pass Program

By Irene Pettyjohn

Crawford County commissioners' concerns that Camp Lehman's work-pass program may be taking local jobs away from county residents and endangering the safety of the community have prompted a reevaluation of the program.

Deputy warden Marvin Winn, in charge of the Michigan Department of Corrections' work-pass program, said someone from the Dept. of Corrections would be reevaluating the program and Camp Lehman work pass coordinator Gary Owens would be returning to the commissioners with the findings. Both job displacement and safety of the work-pass program was discussed at the April 24 commission meeting.

TAKING LOCAL JOBS AWAY?

Commissioner Dennis Long told Lehman officials he believes that both the work-pass and work-crew programs were taking jobs from the local work force. The work-pass program involves inmates working at a private business supervised by the company. The work-crew program has eight to ten prisoners supervised by a state employee.

"In my opinion, the work-pass program does displace some workers, at the very least, it places workers at an unfair disadvantage competing with some jobs in the community," Long said.

He said he thinks it could be substantiated that some jobs in the community once held by local persons on a daily full-time basis have not only been demoted to the work-pass program, but have gone one step beyond that and have been reclassified to positions that can be done by Camp Lehman's work-crew program.

Long said he has no problem using labor to save tax money, labor that is already supported by tax money.

"But when this labor force starts getting into the private sector, into jobs that can be performed by other people," stated Long, "then tax money is defeating its purpose and competing with itself."

NO COMPETITION WITH PRIVATE SECTOR?

"If that's the case, sir," said Winn, "what we'll do is with the individual site you're referring to, we'll make that employer advertise in the newspaper or radio and he'll have to justify to us that he can't fill it from the private sector. We'll pull out of those sites immediately if you feel we're in competition at any job site."

"We just pulled out of a site last week because they laid off an individual and hired four prisoners. It is no longer a job site."

DOING JOBS NO ONE WANTS

The work-pass law was enacted in 1966 and has been at Camp Lehman for about 15 years.

Camp Lehman deputy warden John Wireman said about half of the minimum security facility's 415 inmates participate in either the work-pass (supervised by employer) or work-crew (supervised by state) programs. Approximately 40 inmates are currently participating in the camp's work-pass program in Crawford, Roscommon, Otsego, and Montmorency counties, however, this number has been as high as 70. Camp Lehman's quota is now at 60 inmates. In Crawford County these are mostly minimum wage ($4.25) positions.

"They may be displacing some people," said one Lehman official, "but it's not the intent of the program. The jobs they are doing are jobs nobody wants to do." He said they have not had any complaints about the program.

These jobs range from sorting and stacking scrap wood and grounds work to dish washing.

Wireman said the highest paid inmate is a chef working at a restaurant in Gaylord for $6.00 per hour. Inmates must receive the same wages and benefits that would be paid to any other employee doing the same task.

About half the income earned by inmates participating in the work-pass program is put in an escrow account to help the inmate re-enter society following his release. Inmates are required to pay between $11 and $14 per day for the use of the state van and payment to the driver. This amount varies depending on how many inmates are in the van. Inmates with children receiving public assistance are expected to reimburse the state up to 50% of his income. They also must reimburse the corrections department $2.55 per day for their room and board.

Winn said he has just submitted a proposal to increase the amount of room and board.

The Crawford County Jail currently charges its inmates $7 per day for room and board if the inmate does not work and $10 per day if they do.

Local businesses can hire from Camp Lehman's work-pass program by simply requesting approval as a work site.

HARD TO FILL POSITIONS

Custom Forest Products has employed as many as 22 inmates at one time. Custom Forest Products manager and part owner Mike Hees said the inmates perform the task of sorting, stacking and packaging scrap wood. He said the amount of work performed by the inmates varies, sometime from week-to-week and other times from day-to-day, making it impossible for him to fill the positions from local employees who are usually looking for full-time dependable work.

He said if he did not have the inmate labor, he would either burn the scrap wood for fuel or have it loaded into sea containers and shipped to Mexico or Taiwan, where the labor is cheap. Custom Forest Products participates in the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit program.

Mary Harland manager of Chief Shoppenagon's Hotel, said she cannot find local workers willing to fill her dish washing positions. As of May 5, Shoppenagon's employed four inmates from Camp Lehman. Shoppenagon's also participates in the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit program.

Most businesses participating in the work-pass program qualify for a tax credit equal to 40% of the first $6,000 in wages paid during the first year of employment for each eligible employee under the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit (TJTC) program. Most Crawford County work site employers said they keep an inmate employee for only one year. This turnover keeps the employers eligible for the tax credit program as long as the employee qualifies under TJTC and has worked at the work site for least 90 days or 120 hours. Prisoners are not eligible for unemployment benefits.

DEPENDABLE WORKERS

Gary Owens, Camp Lehman's work-pass coordinator, said businesses like hiring inmates because they are very dependable and are willing to work five to seven days a week. He said the program has very few discipline problems.

"Hiring prisoners is something I said I would never do," said Patti Sajdak, owner of Patti's Towne House, "but I couldn't find anyone willing to work in my kitchen for $4.50 an hour."

Sajdak said advertisements were placed in local papers and with MESC, but no one applied for the jobs.

"I hired one ADC (Aide to Dependent Children) recipient to wash dishes for me," she said, "but one day when she had finished her dishes early I asked her to peel potatoes for me and she told me to peel my own potatoes, she was a dish washer, and then walked out."

Sajdak said she was extremely sat-

ified with both the quality of work and the behavior of all the inmates who have worked for her during the past year. She currently employs only one inmate, but intends to hire a second sometime in June.

DANGER TO COMMUNITY?

Commissioner Joseph Callewact expressed concern that the camp's work-pass program jeopardizes the safety of the community at the board's April 10 meeting.

"My concern is those felons who are given keys to state vehicles and allowed to drive to the various places of employment unsupervised," he said.

The unsupervised work-pass program is only one security problem some residents of Maple Forest Township, where Camp Lehman is located, are concerned about. Fifty-three residents attended a township meeting on September 13, 1988, to voice concerns that the camp's security system has not kept up with the changing inmate population that allows inmates serving sentences for violent crimes into the state's medium and minimum security facilities and that programs, which allow these inmates free access to the county's businesses and public highways, are dangerous to residents. Michigan Department of Corrections warden for the camp programs, William Grant, blamed an overcrowded prison system for the placement of inmates serving time for violent crimes in the camp program.

Grant agreed with residents that the state has not adequately kept the public apprised of these changes.

Work-pass administrators said there are no records of on-the-job misconduct that would have affected the community and estimated that no more than ten inmates have been removed during the fifteen year history of the program.

Long asked Lehman officials if they have ever had to enlist the help of the Michigan State Police to get one work-pass inmate out of a motel room. They confirmed that the incident did occur and told Long that the work site was discontinued because of lack of supervision. All work site employers are responsible to know where the inmates working for them are at all times and some sites have been eliminated because of lack of supervision.

Other work-pass problems related by a Lehman employee include inmates returning from work sites intoxicated, and most recently, the Gaylord State Police are investigating cocaine found in a cassette tape that had been mailed to a work site employer in Gaylord. Wireman said the police are sure the employer is not involved and are looking into a possible link with the inmate working there.

Winn said no inmate participating in the work-pass program has ever attempted an escape.

Inmates are screened before they are allowed in the work-pass program. Wireman said inmates with a history of arson, sex offenses or first degree murder are not allowed in the state's work camp program.

Following the meeting, Commissioner Dennis Long, a patrolman with the Grayling City Police Dept., said the flaw in this policy is that only inmates convicted of a sex offense are considered to have a "history of sex offenses." This he said, leaves inmates who have committed sex offenses but were not convicted for them, eligible to participate in the program. Long also questioned the second degree murder convictions because of plea bargaining.

A Corrections Dept. officer explained that prison camps only have information on the current sentence being served by an inmate and in most cases, does not know if the inmate has served a previous sentence for a sex offense.

CONVICTED OF VIOLENT CRIMES

According to Camp Lehman records, seven of the eleven inmates participating in the work-pass program in Crawford County are serving time for 2nd degree murder, manslaughter, or assault to commit murder.

Five inmates are serving time for assault less than murder or felony assault. Four are doing time for felony firearm convictions. (Five are serving more than one sentence.)

Out of the total work-pass program, 13 were convicted of some type of murder, six for assault to commit murder, 13 for armed robbery or assault to commit robbery and eight were convicted of some type of drug offense. Only five are serving time for a non-assaultive or non-drug related felony.

Three inmates work as work-pass drivers. One is serving time for manslaughter and two for breaking and entering.

Work site employers are not always told what type of offense the inmates working for them have committed.

Harland, manager of the Chief Shoppenagons Motor Hotel, said she was told when she asked, but that she does not routinely ask.

"My only concern is the quality of their work and their behavior when they are working for me," she said.

Sajdak said the inmates' convictions have never been discussed.

"It's my understanding that if he qualifies for the program he is probably over the hump and is on his way out," she said.

Hees said Lehman explained their screening process and as long as the inmates behave, he is not concerned.

Hees said Custom Forest Products has participated in the work-pass program since 1988 and has never had an incident of misconduct, even when provoked by other employees.

Wireman told commissioners most inmates have from 12 to 18 months of their sentence left to serve when they come to Camp Lehman, but correction department records show that the earliest parole date for these working inmates is from May 27, 1991, to September 10, 1993. One inmate working in Otsego County is not eligible for parole until March 8, 1994.

Hees said the longer stays at Camp Lehman became a problem for his company when he discovered inmates were working there more than one year. The question of whether the inmates qualified for benefits such as profit sharing and various company insurances became an issue. He said to avoid this, Custom Forest Products does not keep inmates for longer than one year.

Warden Grant had high praise for Michigan's work-pass program at the Maple Forest Township meeting three years ago, stating, "Michigan is one of the leading states of the nation in terms of its progressiveness and in terms of its successfulness of the work program."

Lehman officials told commissioners they would notify each Crawford County work site by mail advising them that they had 30 days to document the steps taken to fill the positions currently held by inmates with local residents, or face being eliminated as a work site.

However, during a May 13 telephone conversation, Winn said the state can not dictate who local employers can and cannot hire and that the state can only ask work site employers not hire inmates to replace laid-off employees and advertise in an attempt to fill the positions with local workers before hiring inmates.

Winn also said a letter dated May 3 was hand delivered to each Crawford County work site employer "encouraging" them to try to hire locally before hiring inmates. The letter said nothing about a 30-day time period to advertise for local employees. It said nothing about being eliminated as a work site. By May 15, only one work site in Crawford County had received the letter. The three other Crawford County work sites said they had not received the letter.

Winn said employers are told they must attempt to fill their positions from the local work force before they will fill it with an inmate, but employers are not required to show documentation of that effort.

WORK-CREW PROGRAM DISPLACING WORKERS?

Several Camp Grayling employees attended the April 24th commission meeting because they are concerned about the increasing number of inmate work-crews at the camp.

Grover Palmer said he is sure these crews take jobs away from local building and painting contractors and has written letters to several local papers expressing this belief. His letter published in the Avalanche earlier is reprinted here along with a reply from an inmate at Camp Lehman.

PROJECTS WOULDN'T BE DONE OTHERWISE

In a letter to Crawford County commission chairman Robert McLachlan, Camp Grayling Commander LTC Wayne Koppa wrote, "projects completed by the prison crews at Camp Grayling are projects that would otherwise be left unaccomplished."

He said at the same time Camp Grayling's prison crews have increased from two to four crews, its full-time and part-time work force has also increased from 42 full-time permanent and two permanent part-time employees to 46 full-time permanent employees. In addition to the permanent staff there are also 33 seasonal state employees funded through the Training Site Contract.

LTC Koppa said Camp Grayling is aware of the agreement between the camp and the unions representing its state employees and has remained consistent with the requirements set forth in the labor agreement.

Grayling's Department of Public Works (DPW) has employed a Camp Lehman inmate work crew for about ten years. Initially they performed cemetery maintenance, mowing and raking. Today they also do ground maintenance at the City Hall and City Park as well as painting and carpentry work at city building sites.

In the winter the inmate crew shovels the school route, pedestrian crossings on bridges, and street intersections that snowplows fill with snow. They also keep city fire hydrants open.

"[This is] intense manual labor which the city would not have the manpower to do with only six people working with the DPW," said city manager Jerry Morford.

Morford said the city pays $5 per inmate per day.

"The first $2.50 is paid to the prisoners and the remaining $2.50 helps pay state administration expenses," he said.

MORE WORK CREWS AT LANDFILL

Jack Sietloff told commissioners he was laid-off from the Crawford/Otsego Landfill Recycling Center last year after being told there was not enough work, yet 10 Camp Lehman inmates continued to work there for two more months.

He said part of the time the prison work-crew worked without benefit of a supervisor except for a Frederic constable, hired by the state to supervise the crew.

"They hired a constable out of Frederic Township to guard them," he said. "Most people don't know this stuff and it's wrong." Sietloff said he witnessed Dallas Hudson, work-crew coordinator, take a knife off one of the inmates.

"They have access to too many things out there," he said.

Corrections officials said they checked into the landfill situation because Sietloff had complained and the landfill director told them Sietloff would have been laid off any way because the work was seasonal.

HARTWICK PINES CREW

Hartwick Pines State Park will be hiring one less seasonal employee this summer because of a recent fee increase from 90 cents per day per inmate to $2.50 per day.

Because Michigan's fiscal year runs from October to October Bacon said there are no provisions in his budget for the increase, which began January 1, 1991. He said he was faced with either losing one seasonal worker or his prison work-crew.

"With all the cutbacks in our department, the work-crew is the park's main work force," he explained, "with the exception of our short term labor for 14 to 16 weeks in the summer."

Bacon said the inmate work-crew does a tremendous amount of work at the park and to make up the difference yet keep all five summer employees, he was forced to cut one seasonal job from 40 to 30 hours per week and shorten the length of employment by one week from the remaining four positions, the equivalent of one ten week employee.

Camp Lehman is located on state park property that was a gift to the state of Michigan from Karen Hartwick in 1907. The Hartwick deed restricts the state's use of the property to recreational and conservation purposes administered by the conservation department, and that if at any future time, the property is used by the state for other than these purposes, the land is to revert to the Hartwick heirs.

Bacon said he thinks Camp Lehman's use of the property conflicts with the intent of the deed, especially since the vast majority of the inmates no longer work in conservation related projects. Commissioners have asked their legal counsel for an opinion of the Hartwick deed.

At the April 24th meeting, Winn said the Dept. of Corrections needs to know the same type of information about the work programs that the commissioners want to know. He said it would be no problem for the Dept. of Corrections to review the program and return with the information to the commissioners.

Prisoners Shouldn't Take Jobs Away From Law Abiding Citizens

(Published Feb. 21, 1991)

We are constantly being told by the media, labor leaders, and politicians, both at local and state levels, that we have entered or will be entering a Recession, Economic Downturn, or whatever the new buzz word is that describes the economic situation that exists today.

When jobs are at such a premium, the State of Michigan is in direct competition for jobs in northern Michigan. Jobs that could help needy families, or at least allow a teenager his or her chance to enter the work force. This may never exist, because the State of Michigan is now heavily into the Manpower Business. They have a cheap labor force — PRISONERS. They sell labor to anyone who will buy — then they charge the prisoners for the bus ride to and from work, for lunch if he needs it, and will supply a supervisor, if necessary. The concept of allowing prisoners to work outside of prison is usually pushed under the guise of On-The-Job-Training for some skill or Main Streaming and in some cases this is true. But in most cases, prison crews do menial work in jobs requiring no skills. When skills are needed, crews are put together to take advantage of skills the prisoners already have. How can an employer resist — a work force that works for pennies a day, completely supervised, and promoted by the State of Michigan. The average citizen in northern Michigan can't find a decent paying job and when he does, he pays taxes to supply his boss with someone who can do the job cheaper. Prisoners should only be doing community service work. Something that benefits the area, not taking away jobs from decent, law abiding citizens who are trying to raise a family. We shouldn't be punished for obeying the law and not going to prison.

Job Training Programs Help Reduce Recidivism Rate Among Prisoners

March 1, 1991

Greetings. Please consider this a response to Mr. Palmer's recent "Prisoners Shouldn't Take Jobs Away From Law Abiding Citizens" letter.

It is apparent to me that Mr. Palmer knows very little about the Department of Corrections Work Pass Program or Work Crews. As such, Mr. Palmer does your readers a great disservice by omitting or failing to inform them of many important facets of the Work Pass Program. First, the Work Pass Program is one of the very few programs within the Department of Corrections which operates at no cost to the general public. Indeed, work pass participants pay for the opportunity to work in the community. Furthermore, work passers pay federal, state, and local taxes; as well as contributing to the cost of their incarceration via the payment of room and board.

Another important point of the Work Pass Program is that those participants with dependents pay up to 50% of their net earnings in back child support or repay the State for ADC payments made to their dependents. Thus the Work Pass Program not only pays for itself, it also pays back society for the cost of incarceration and society's cost in caring for the prisoner's family during his incarceration.

Those prisoners allowed to participate in the program are carefully screened by the Department. They are minimum custody prisoners whose over-all criminal history and institutional behavior weighs heavily in determining whether or not individual participation in the program will be allowed. Obviously, public confidence in the program is of paramount importance to the Department. Indeed, many who apply for Work Pass are denied simply because the Department feels their approval would "undermine public confidence in the program."

A recent study conducted by a major Michigan newspaper, found that those state prisoners who participate in educational, vocational, or on-the-job training programs, immediately before their release, have a recidivism rate of six to 15%. Conversely, those who do not participate in such programming, have a recidivism rate of 33 to 40%. Given the extremely high cost of crime, I would think Mr. Palmer would strongly support such a low cost low risk program which has such a high rehabilitative potential.

Moreover, I have talked to a number of local business owners who participate in the Work Pass Program. They have informed me that they cannot find local citizens who will work at the jobs offered for the wages they can afford to pay. Mr. Palmer, would you work in a commercial kitchen for eight to ten hours a day at close to minimum wage? Would you have your children work for minimum wage instead of going to school? I would certainly think and hope not.

While I am not very familiar with the work crews, I always thought the jobs they perform, cleaning parks, digging graves, shoveling snow, and refurbishing public buildings, was community service. I would also assume that's why they are called public work crews. What would you call them Mr. Palmer?

So Mr. Palmer, what would you have these prisoners do to redeem themselves? Would you have them sit and look at four walls for years on end? Would you attach a ball and chain to their legs while having them perform some meaningless task, such as breaking rocks?

How would you have prisoners reenter society, as over 94% of them will in the future? Bitter? Uneducated? Unemployable? Have you considered the fact that a work history is the single most important factor employers look for when hiring new employees? Have you also considered the fact that the overwhelming majority of ex-cons who gain meaningful employment never return to prison? Or did you even think of these questions before you casually put forth such an irresponsible letter? I think not.

If you must lash out at someone, lash out at your government officials who send billions of dollars overseas while Americans sleep on the streets, or go hungry every day. Please, don't lash out at one of the few cost-effective methods of rehabilitation left. You do yourself, your readers, and all prisoners a great disservice.

Mr. Palmer, although I agree with very little of what you said, I will give you this, at least you said something. It's too bad you are part of the problem and not part of the solution.

I can only hope that the next time you feel the need to speak out, you will choose a subject you know something about; or at least get your facts straight.

Opinions

Let's Talk About It

By Joe Murphy

On May seventh, one of Crawford County's historic buildings, like so many others, fell victim of fire. The AuSable Hotel, a landmark in Frederic for over a century has burned to the ground. I often thought of the old hotel and the fun cousin Bob and I used to have there when his folks Jack and Lelia Bigham owned it back in the thirties and start of the forties. The bull pen or room number twelve was a big room and we often played there on cold winter days. There were several beds in that room and plenty of pillows for a real pillow fight. If those old walls could have talked they would have had many tales to tell of the old lumber jacks who once made Frederic a booming town. I have heard many tales of the brawls that took place there back in the lumber days. Back in the thirties, deer hunters filled it at deer season, some coming back year after year. What was referred to as the Cobb bunch made the bull pen home for several seasons, I believe they were from Stockbridge.

I do not know who built it, but I do know that George and Pat Burke owned it at one time way back. Mr. Henry Shaw followed the Burkes, then Jack and Lelia Bigham. Al Kaiser bought it from them. The Kaisers in turn sold it to Nancy and Mary Sajdak. It has changed hands several times since then but I do not know who all had it. It became known as Sajdak's Swamp many years ago, later it was just the Swamp.

We have had quite a change in the weather. The fact that it turned hot so quick has most of us suffering from the heat. When it changed from the forties to the eighties so quick was a bummer.

Well, the old man has had a few good meals of morels this year. I never found many at a time, but with a lot of walking, I could bring home enough for a meal. I guess it figured out to about ten to a mile but I figure it was worth it.

It looks like we are all primed for a real good year for lilacs, I see a lot of bushes taking on a purple color. Soon the smell of them will fill the air around our town; another pleasure of spring. I really enjoy the smell of them and like to stroll around when their scent is heavy in the air.

One thing I noticed as I drove through Frederic was the large number of people working at cleaning up the site where the hotel burned. It looked to me as though the Frederic tradition of neighbor helping neighbor is still alive and well. The Frederic I remember was a nice place to live. How long will it be before the people of Frederic take action to stop the destruction of their community. I drive through Frederic today and see the junk that is now the hallmark of a once proud and neat little community. When are those people who take good care of their property going to revolt against those who have destroyed property values with their junk?

Letters To The Editor

Congress Conned People With Tax Increases

Dear Editor:

As one of your readers, I want to urge you in the strongest terms possible to increase your coverage of the fact that for every new dollar that Congress has raised this year in new taxes, it has increased spending by $1.78. As Reader's Digest reported, the budget and new taxes are a "sham."

To put it bluntly, last year Congress conned the American people and the news media. They told us we should go along with their "deficit reduction package" which included tax increases for every American because we had to get the deficit under control. But in the end, they just wanted to take more of our income in taxes.

In the name of deficit reduction, they enacted the second largest tax increase ever and then turned right around and increased spending by $111 billion — pushing the deficit to a new record.

It was the clearest case ever of false advertising. And, as they demonstrated when they destroyed Gramm-Rudman and the other controls on spending, Congress never intended to reduce the deficit or control wasteful spending.

Tragically, the American people and the news media bought the "this budget agreement will reduce the deficit" story hook, line, and sinker. And now we are paying the price in higher taxes and higher deficits. I urge you to expand your coverage and report important facts such as:

1. Congress enacted the second largest tax increase in history;
2. Congress increased spending by $111 billion;
3. Congress enlarged the deficit by $100 billion to an all-time record of $320 billion for FY 1991 alone;
4. Congress pushed the national debt to a new record and increased the annual interest payment on the debt to a staggering $254 BILLION; and,
5. Congress destroyed the Gramm-Rudman Deficit Reduction Act and all other effective controls on future congressional wasteful spending.

As Citizens Against Government Waste has pointed out repeatedly, we have this skyrocketing deficit today not because of the recession but because Congress refuses to stop its reckless spending. Unless we get Congress' runaway taxes and wasteful deficit spending under control we will all be in very, very serious trouble very soon. I urge you to give more coverage to this all-important story. Thank you.

P.S. If you need more information on how Congress is squandering America's future, I encourage you to contact Citizens Against Government Waste, 1301 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Suite 400, Washington, D.C. 20036. They are leading the fight against government waste, higher taxes, and the deficit.

Notes From The Woods

By Nancy Lemmen

Perhaps nowhere at Grayling High School is the quest for excellence greater than in the band program, under the direction of Dennis Ormsbee.

That Ormsbee's band students often achieve excellence is obvious, through their community performances and their participation in the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association's (M.S.B.O.A.) annual band and solo/ensemble festivals.

With many community members, you have attended at least some of their performances and have read about them regularly in the Avalanche. But unless you are a devout follower of the GHS band, you probably missed their latest honor — a gala performance by three of them in the All-Michigan

Honors Band at the 29th annual Youth Arts Festival held at Western Michigan University.

From over 3,600 entrants, 125 outstanding high school musicians were chosen to perform in concert on May 11, based on their proficiency ratings at the state solo/ensemble festival.

The GHS musicians who performed in the honors band were junior Adam Anger, son of Rodger and Peggy Anger, sophomore Yolanda Rosi, daughter of Tomlin and Marilyn Rosi, trumpet; and Gretchen Dice, daughter of George and Janet Dice, oboe. Rachel Paulson, daughter of Dennis and Gerry Paulson, bassoon, was an alternate.

After two days of rehearsal, the band performed under the direction of Michigan Band Teacher of the Year, Richard Anderson, of Mattawan Consolidated Schools, and guest conductor Donald Flickinger.

"This is an excellent showing for Grayling," said Ormsbee. "This is the most students I have ever had in the State Honors Band. This is very exciting and I couldn't be more proud of this great accomplishment."

No, indeed. Nor should he be.

Three GHS students chosen as members of a prestigious 100 plus-member band.

I am in awe.

YOUTH ARTS FESTIVAL

I love excellence. I especially love to see it in young people, when their lives are still full of hopes and dreams and promise. And I confess that I am predisposed to appreciate it in the arts areas, which often tend to be short-changed in many schools.

To perform at the Michigan Youth

Arts Festival is to be surrounded by excellence — in every area of the visual and performing arts.

In addition to the honors band, the three-day festival included performances by classical and jazz vocal ensembles, all-star jazz combos, all-star jazz ensembles, honors string quartet, vocal soloists, honors orchestra, theatre and dance groups. There was a visual arts exhibit and a creative writing competition in fiction, poetry and drama.

The MYAF was organized in 1963 by Dr. Joseph Maddy, who is widely known as the founder of Interlochen National Music Camp. That same year he inaugurated Interlochen Arts Academy, and his first MYAF was a statewide musical talent screening. It culminated in a festival in May as a part of Michigan Week activities.

Throughout the years, other arts disciplines became a part of the festival. Today, with its eight-month adjudication process including over 40,000 students, it is a unique multi-arts event, with the support of 14 statewide arts organizations and the participation of nearly 800 students, teachers and administrators.

In his program notes, MYAF Honorary Chairperson Roger Jacobi wrote, "Today the state boasts numerous high quality symphony orchestras, choruses, dance companies, theatre groups and literary publications."

... But let there be no question about where it all began. It began in Michigan's public and private schools where inspired and dedicated teachers had the opportunity to work with interested and talented young people."

"The results have been astounding. Many students have gone on to a professional life in the arts. Many continue to participate in the arts as an avocation. And many have become consumers of the arts. But that is what instruction in the arts is all about — to develop a love and appreciation for the arts in order to lead a happier and fuller life."

CASD PROGRAM

"It was probably one of the best musical experiences of my life," said Adam, who has had a wide variety of musical experiences as a performer and viewer. "Because the selected group of musicians were so good."

If we are to have excellence, our students must be offered a wide variety of opportunities in which they might excel. The Crawford AuSable School District band program offers opportunities to aspiring instrumental musicians.

Thank you, Dennis Ormsbee, for your constant devotion and never-ending work in the band program.

Congratulations and well done, Adam, Yolanda, Gretchen, Rachel. Your accomplishment should increase everybody's pride in our town, our school district, our youth. I know it does mine.

Almanack

Richard Milliman

Some folks are real touchy

WHAT DO AMERICA'S favorite combat general and a battery-operated fake rabbit have in common?

They have a lot of friends who are real touchy about their respective images.

Case in point:

Friends of Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf are somewhat upset because comedian Jonathan Winters in a television commercial for an airlines company wears combat fatigues — just as the general did during much of the Persian Gulf war. Mr. Winters also points his index finger straight ahead — just as Gen. Schwarzkopf did during most of his televised war briefings — and promises "air superiority" just as the general and his forces produced over Iraq.

So far, so good. What upsets Schwarzkopf-ophiles (to coin a word) is that Jonathan Winters bears a striking resemblance to their hero... or vice versa. Suffice it to say, that when both are garbed in combat fatigues, they look alike.

THEN THERE'S THE BUNNY, which is an advertising creation for a battery company.

The long-running bunny ad campaign depicts the battery-operated rabbit bursting in on other people's television commercials, which are reproduced in fairly authentic manner. He/she interrupts beer ads and telephone ads and cosmetic ads and anything else its creators decide is fit subject for their parody.

The point, it would appear, is that the bunny's batteries run so long they just go on and on and on... even after his/her own commercials are over.

So far, so good. But what upsets the bunny's friends is that another ad agency, representing a beer company, produced a commercial that parodies the bunny. The battery bunny wanders into this other beer commercial, but beer is being sold, not batteries.

Friends of the bunny are crying foul, and went to court to prevent the beer company from using the parody on their parody.

To bunny-backers, apparently it depends on whose parody is being parodied.

IN BOTH CASES, where's the beef (to cite yet another ad campaign)? What's wrong with a little humor?

Of course, the whole thing may be a couple more examples of the fertility of the advertising mind. What better way to draw a little more attention to the promotion efforts of all involved?

Obviously, there's no better way than free publicity... such as being produced in a very minor way right here in this column.

In the Norman Schwarzkopf-Jonathan Winters face-off, maybe the wrong side is protesting. After all, Jonathan Winters has been in the public eye a lot longer than Norman Schwarzkopf. And one of Mr. Winters' comical characterizations is of a military figure, somewhat similar — in a very broad, comical sense — to the public persona which the general has created.

Maybe Mr. Winters should be suing the general.

Naw... let's all just sit back and laugh a little.

SENATORIAL HUNT OVER

— Pennsylvania Gov. Robert Casey finally found someone to go to the United States Senate to serve out the term of Sen. John Heinz, who died in an airplane tragedy a few weeks ago.

A state bureaucrat and former Washington hand named Harris Wofford finally got the nod, and has assumed his post in what has been called the world's greatest deliberative body. Mr. Wofford, a Democrat, is planning to run in the special election next year to serve out the balance of the Heinz term.

The hunt for a Heinz replacement was fascinating to watch from a distance. Gov. Casey apparently shopped around for an appointee without much success for almost a month. A couple of congressmen turned him down.

Gov. Casey even took a hurried trip into Michigan and offered the job to Lee Iacocca, the outspoken president of Chrysler Corporation. Mr. Iacocca said "no" too. Then Gov. Casey turned to Mr. Wofford, whose record indicates he may well make a fine senator.

Lee Iacocca as a member of the Senate would have been an interesting exercise. He would have had an unmatched opportunity to put into practice much of the preaching he has offered about government's role in the manufacturing and sales areas. Wisely, Mr. Iacocca said "no thanks."

Too bad: It would have been fun to watch.

Van Crashes Through Shop

George Granger will probably remember the hair cut he received from Russ Hubbard on Tuesday, May 14, for a long time.

Granger was sitting in the barber's chair and Dean Welch was waiting for his turn when a Chevrolet van, driven by a 74-year-old Grayling man, crashed through the plate glass window of Hubbard's Barber Shop on Huron Street, taking with it a portion of the brick wall.

"Miraculously no one was injured," said Police Chief Peter Stephan.

The driver was arrested for drunk driving. His name is being withheld pending his arraignment scheduled for June 4. Chief Stephan said the driver suffered an apparent heart attack while in jail and was taken to Mercy Hospital. He was discharged from the hospital on May 16 and is free on bond.

With Memorial Day just around the corner, the Grayling Police Dept. wants to remind Grayling residents that garage sale signs should be attached to stakes and not nailed to public utility poles, which are private property. Police Chief Peter Stephan said any signs attached to utility poles will be removed and discarded. Staked signs should also be removed immediately following the end of the garage sale.

All signs should be below motorists' eye level to avoid being a visual obstruction.

The Grayling City Police Dept. has begun receiving complaints about the use of skateboards on city streets and sidewalks. According to a 1989 city ordinance, skateboarding is not allowed within the city's C-1 zoning district. This district includes the general business district of Michigan Avenue from the County Building to Spruce Street, Peninsular Avenue, and the I-75 Business Loop beginning at Pointe North Motel, at the corner of McClellan Street and North Down River Road, continuing south to the I-75 Grayling entrance at the Holiday Inn.

Our Night Sky

By Gary Harland

Northern Skies—mid April report
Dustin Lovely and Tim Zigala ask, "Just what do the stars hold for us in the future Gary?" Okay. Obviously they mistook me for an astrologer. It isn't the first time. But I'm not choosy — I'll answer it anyways.

The short answer is: pack your bags guys. You have about ten billion years to vacate the premises before the whole thing goes up in smoke.

Assuming a near-by star doesn't go super-nova and irradiate our solar system with deadly high-energy radiation; assuming a massive dark-body doesn't suddenly stroll through the solar system totally disrupting our Earth's orbit; assuming a large asteroid doesn't impact our Earth plunging it into a century-long "nuclear winter"; and assuming we manage not to send ourselves into early extinction through ecological or nuclear stupidity we may have ten billion years before the Sun dies taking us with it.

The Sun is our "bottom line." It isn't going to last forever. Stars are born in vast nebular clouds of dust and gas — the final remains of dead stars and assorted other cosmic debris. In their infancy they spin off left-over stuff that becomes planets, comets and — at least in the case of our star — us. It may not do much for your self-esteem to think of yourself as cosmic left-overs but that's life. They grow up and usually gravitationally "marry" one or more near-by companion stars. Then they raise their little solar families of planets, get old and fat and die. Sound familiar. Olaf Stapledon, a British science-fiction writer beautifully explored the parallels in his novels "Starmaker" and "Nebulamaker."

In human terms the Sun is a young adult — sort of late twenties. It has been around for about five billion years and hopefully, given its size and type, has another ten billion years left. While it does seem to be single it has had some sort of social life. There is the relationship with Jupiter who failed to achieve stardom. And there is speculation that the Sun may have had a massive, older, larger companion in the past. And of course there is its billion plus extended family of other Milky Way Galaxy aunt, uncle and cousin stars.

But its emotional life is less of a concern to us than its appetite. Where we get our energy from the food we eat, the Sun gets its from hydrogen. It consumes hydrogen in unbelievably enormous amounts. Fortunately there is plenty to go around for right now. Eventually though it will slurp up the last of it and start munching heavier elements. At that point it bloats up to many times its present size and turns red as a beet. This is also the point at which Earth checks out of the cosmic scheme of things as we become part of the Sun — briefly.

The death of a star is largely determined by its size. The massive super-giant stars succumb in brilliant supernova explosion. The smaller giant stars die in ordinary nova explosions. Small stars like our Sun are more likely to just over-heat, blowing off chunks of their stuff over a few thousand years until there's nothing left but tiny white-dwarf surrounded by a massive, fluorescent ball or smoke ring — a "planetary" nebula (a mistaken name that stuck).

Want to extend a birthday greeting by phone? Call on a push-button phone and play "Happy Birthday" by pushing the following buttons in the appropriate rhythm: 1,1,2,1,1,6; 1,1,2,1,1,3; 1,1,1,1,1,8,4,1; 1,1,1,6,4,2,1.

The beautiful Ring Nebula visible in small telescopes is just such an object. It looks like a tiny, perfect smoke ring in space! These planetary nebula only last a few thousand years before disappearing, leaving the old white dwarf at their center lost among the myriad of stars. So there you go Dustin and Tim. The stars are our future. Also our past and present. We're made of the same stuff, part of the same creation, bound by the same fate. So, what's your sign eh?

"Free" means no charge. So how can it be "free" checking if you have to pay whenever your balance dips below the minimum? Or whenever you write too many checks?

The fact is, truly free checking is only accomplished at your credit union, although many banks would have you believe otherwise. At Wurtsmith Community Federal Credit Union we'll show you the meaning of free checking with a share draft account that requires no minimum balance, no per draft charge and no monthly service charge. And your money can earn dividends just as it would in our savings accounts. For free checking service, check out a Wurtsmith Credit Union share draft account. We're good for you and your checkbook, too!

Bear Archery Honors Hatfield

Bear Archery recently honored Jim Hatfield, Supervisor of Receiving/Finished Goods, for 40 years of service. Hatfield, 61, accepted the award with his wife, Marie, who has worked at Bear for 23 years. The Hatfields competed in archery tournaments for several years before Bear Archery's move from Grayling, to Gainesville, FL.

An instinctive shooter, Jim Hatfield has been shooting a Bear Grizzly, his favorite bow, since 1976. He has witnessed enormous growth at Bear over the years, noting that in 1951 Bear produced 32 "stick bows," or recurves, a day. Today, Bear Archery is the industry leader and manufactures both recurve and compound bows.

In 1958, Hatfield became supervisor of the Glass Department. He was promoted to supervisor of all three shifts in the Bow Department in 1960. Twelve years later, Hatfield was named safety director and also wrote specifications for all Bear products. In 1976, he became supervisor of receiving and in 1984 took on the added responsibility for the Finished Goods Department.

For his efforts, Hatfield received a beautiful Fred Bear Presentation Grade Knife. At his 35-year anniversary with Bear, he received a Fred Bear Signature bow.

"Jim Hatfield is a dedicated and loyal employee of Bear Archery who has devoted two-thirds of his life to a single company," commented Charles T. Smith, President/CEO. "He certainly has been instrumental in seeing Bear's growth from infancy to the largest bow manufacturer in the world."

Hatfield reminisces about working with a legend — Fred Bear. "He was terrific. He always had time to stop and talk to me."

MUSEUM DONATION—Deputy Tim Coe (left) of the Crawford County Sheriff Dept. is pictured turning over this 1960 Massey Ferguson snowmobile to the Crawford County Historical Museum on behalf of the county. The snowmobile was one of the first snowmobiles in the state to be registered to a government agency. Accepting the donation on behalf of the Crawford County Historical Museum is Robert Ruddy, museum curator.

Tawas Knocks Grayling Out Of State Tournament

The Grayling High School varsity baseball team fell to Tawas, 15-2, in pre-district action on May 16. Senior David Teddy took the loss for the Vikings.

"We just didn't relax," said Coach Fred Wolcott. "We played real tight, kind of nervous. We're more experienced than that. It's supposed to be fun, not work."

Tawas got eight runs on three hits in the 1st inning. They added one more in the 4th to make the score 9-0.

Grayling managed only three hits, all of which came in the bottom of the 4th. Senior Max Prosser singled with one out. Senior Bob Harris singled with two away to drive in Prosser. Senior Matt Branch singled to drive in Harris, bringing the score to 9-2.

In the 5th inning, Tawas scored five more runs to win, 15-2, on the mercy rule.

The Vikings host West Branch on Tuesday, May 28, at 4 p.m., in their final game of the 1991 season.

JV Team Wins 2 More

The Grayling High School junior varsity baseball team picked up two more wins against Lincoln-Alcona on May 13.

The Vikings won the afternoon's first game, 13-4, behind the pitching of sophomore Scott Garner, who went the entire six innings and struck out nine batters.

Grayling scored three runs in each of the 1st, 2nd and 3rd innings, to bring the score to 9-0 at the end of the 3rd.

In the 4th inning, Alcona scored four runs.

But Grayling answered with four of their own in the bottom of the 4th. Neither team scored again.

Hitting for Grayling were: Garner, two for four; sophomore Andy Lochner, two for four; sophomore Eric LaForest, two for three; sophomore Nathan Mead, two for four; sophomore Mitch McMillan, one for three (a home run); sophomore Clem Lochner, one for three; and sophomore Jason Brigham, one for three.

Grayling led, 6-0, in the second game when it was called after three innings. (The junior varsity rule is that no new inning is started after 8 p.m.)

Sophomore Mike Kirmo pitched for the Vikings. He had struck out seven of the nine Tiger batters when the game was called.

Sophomore Steve Branch, who went two for two, was the leading hitter for Grayling. C. Lochner, McMillan, Lochner was three for four at the plate, with three singles and one walk. She made one put-out and one assist.

Junior Andrea Austin was one for three, with one single and one walk. She had one put-out.

Sophomore Gina Luppino was one for three and walked once.

After six innings of play, the score was tied at 3-3.

"We played a great six and a half innings," said Barber. "I feel it was one of the best games we've played. We hit well, worked as a team and just played an all-around great game."

"Our errors in the field in the 7th inning hurt us, allowing them seven runs," she continued. "We turned it around and batted well, but it just wasn't enough."

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age.

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

It's yours for the asking, so send for it now. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped. JVs Win Wild One 18-17

After a rain storm delay of 35 minutes, the Grayling High School junior varsity softball team defeated Lincoln-Alcona, 18-17, on May 14.

Freshman Jackie Cragg pitched 6 2/3 innings, when she was relieved by sophomore Sarah Mleek.

Grayling was never behind in the game, leading 10-3 in the 3rd inning and 17-12 in the 6th. But in the 7th, Alcona closed the gap to only one point before falling to the Vikings.

GHS had two double plays, the first handled by sophomore shortstop Sara Palmer and freshman Sandy Pittman at 1st base, the second by Palmer to sophomore Jody Pratt at 2nd and then to Pittman.

Viking hitters included: Palmer, three for five (including two triples), Pratt, two for two; Pittman, two for five; Mleek, three for five; sophomore Tammy Romain, two for five (including a double); sophomore Tia Long, three for five; Cragg, one for five; and sophomore Patty Puls, two for five (including a triple).

"They played well as a team, helping one another with plays and communicating on the field," said Coach Lori Johnson.

The 2nd game went only two innings, with a 2-2 tie, before it was called for darkness.

The junior varsity squad travels to West Branch on Tuesday, May 28, for their final game of the 1991 season.

Healthy Trees Better Able To Survive Gypsy Moth

Roy Spangler, CED
Cooperative Extension Service

Losing their leaves to Gypsy moth caterpillars or other defoliators puts trees under stress. Healthy trees usually survive one defoliation and often two or three. Trees already weakened by disease, drought, poor nutrition or other stresses, however, may die after one Gypsy moth assault.

"One thing homeowners can do to thwart the Gypsy moth is to water and fertilize valuable landscape trees," says Curt Peterson, Extension horticulture specialist at Michigan State University. "This is especially important with oaks, poplars, and other species that Gypsy moth caterpillars prefer to feed on."

Another strategy is to replace trees lost to Gypsy moth or other causes with species less susceptible to Gypsy moth damage.

At the top of the Gypsy moth caterpillar's list of favorite foods are oaks, some poplars and birches, willows, crabapples, red maples, and purple leaf plums. All except willows are commonly used in landscaping. "Some birches, particularly the European white birch so commonly used around homes, are also susceptible to attack by bronze birch borer and birch leaf miner," Peterson notes. "Trees weakened by these insects are very likely to die after one defoliation by Gypsy moth."

The caterpillars usually won't feed on ash, pear, honey locust, London plane tree or sycamore, juniper, tulip tree, spruces, yews, hemlocks, firs, black locust, magnolia, lilac, euonymus, dogwood, catalpa, azalea, arborvitae, ginkgo, and black gum.

Between these two groups in susceptibility are spirea, serviceberry (Amelanchier), hickory, alder, basswood, ironwood, beech, elm white pine, blue spruce, sweetgum, river birch, yellow birch, and sugar, silver and Norway maples.

"The Gypsy moth problem will be with us for a long time," Peterson observes. "There isn't much homeowners can do to combat the infestation directly. But watering and fertilizing susceptible trees and planting less vulnerable ones can limit the pest's impact on the home grounds."

Desert Ice?

With so much interest centered on the deserts of Saudi Arabia, it is interesting to note that Arabian Prince Muhammad Al Aisal once considered lassoing icebergs from ships and towing them to his home in Saudi Arabia to fill the reservoirs and irrigate the deserts.

SHARING THE ROAD SAFELY

Auto Repair "Bill of Rights"

Your vehicle isn't running right. You know it has to go to the repair shop for work. And, of course, it's going to cost money. Wouldn't it be nice if you could know what's wrong with it and what it will cost before it's fixed and you get the bill? Not only would it be nice, but, in Michigan a repair facility must give you this information before it may legally begin work on your vehicle.

Under Michigan law, you are entitled to certain information and other protections in any transaction with a motor vehicle repair facility. Often referred to as the "Auto Repair Bill of Rights," these protections include the right to:

- a written estimate of cost before repairs,
- inspect and keep replaced parts,
- a detailed final bill,
- have major repairs performed by certified mechanics.

Probably the most important feature of this law is your right to a written estimate. According to the law, a repair facility must give you a written estimate before doing any repair work that will cost $20 or more. On repairs of under $20, the facility must give you a written estimate if you ask for one.

The written estimate must state what work will be done, the price for parts, the price for labor, and an estimate of labor time. The estimate, if you accept it, becomes a contract or agreement between you and the facility. The facility must give you a copy of the estimate.

Suppose you accept the estimate, leave your vehicle for repairs and the facility later finds that additional work, above the estimate, is needed. The facility must contact you and get your permission before they can legally do any work that will go over the estimate by more than $10 or 10%, whichever is less. If you say "no" to the additional work, they cannot do it and bill you for it.

The only time a repair facility does not have to give you a written estimate is if you voluntarily "waive" your right to it. This must be done in writing, on a form provided by the facility. A facility may not legally require you to sign a waiver as a condition of doing business. Even if you waive the written estimate, you still may specify a dollar amount that the facility cannot exceed without your approval.

Remember, when your vehicle needs repair work or maintenance, you have a right to know what it will cost and to say "yes" or "no" ahead of time. It's your money. Always get a written estimate. It's your right under the law. If you have a complaint or problem regarding an auto repair or purchase that you cannot settle with the dealer or facility, contact: Michigan Department of State, Bureau of Automotive Regulation, Lansing, MI, 48918, or phone 1-800-292-4204.

Notice of a Public Hearing on Increasing Property Taxes

Please take notice that on May 31, 1991, at 12:00 o'clock p.m. at the middle school conference room, the Board of Education of the Crawford AuSable School District will hold a public hearing on the levying in 1991 of an additional proposed millage rate of 1.0093 mills for operating purposes pursuant to Act 5, Public Acts of Michigan, 1982.

The Board of Education has the complete authority to establish that 28.35 mills be levied in 1991 from within its present authorized millage rate.

The maximum additional proposed millage rate would increase revenues for operating purposes from ad valorem property tax levies in 1990 otherwise permitted by Act 5, Public Acts of Michigan, 1982, by five and 55/100 percent (5.55%).

The figure for increase in revenue for operating purposes is based on the latest estimate of state equalized valuation of property located within the school district. State equalized valuation will not be finalized until after the fourth Monday in May. In the event that state equalized valuation as finalized is for any reason higher than the estimate used for this hearing, the Board of Education must hold another public hearing before levying millage on any higher valuation.

The purpose of the hearing is to receive testimony and discuss the levy of an additional millage rate. Not less than seven (7) days following the public hearing, the Board of Education may approve all or any portion of the proposed additional millage rate.

The notice is given by order of the Board of Education.

The Girl And The Pony

Once upon a time there was a little girl, about seven or eight, with very long brown hair. She was about five foot. She was a very good girl, and very nice. She lived with her mother on a very large farm in California. She always dreamed about being a famous horseback rider. Her mother always said, "If I have time I'll teach you to ride a horse." The girl thought her mother didn't care because she never did teach her to ride.

One day Kate thought, "I'll teach myself to ride." There was a palomino pony with a star on its forehead that she had always loved.

"I'll go ride that pony," she said aloud. She ran to the stable and put a saddle on the horse. Once outside she mounted. Or she tried. She put her foot in the stirrup and put her leg over the saddle, but then she slipped down over the other side. When Kate stood up and took a step forward she tripped over a stone.

"Oh, for Pete's sake," she muttered. "And don't look at me like that you pony." She tried again to mount. This time she made it. "Go horsey, go," Kate cried. The horse didn't budge.

The Big Game

Once there was a man named Speedy. He was a good football player. Speedy is 23 years old and 6'3". He has black and brown hair. He has a friend named Bo Jackson. Bo came over one day and asked Speedy if he would like to start training for the next game they are having on Saturday. Bo and Speedy are both on the same team. Bo is a running back and Speedy is a wide receiver. Some days passed and it was time for the game to begin. The announcer was calling off the people of the 49er's. After that he called off the starting people for the Detroit Lions. Bo and Speedy were on the Lions. They were starting the first quarter and Bo said to Speedy, "Are you nervous?" Speedy said, "Yes, I am." The players took the field. The 49er's are kicking off to the Lions. The ball is kicked, it's up, up, and caught by Bo. Bo runs it to the 30 yard line and gets tackled. The quarterback

Cinderella

Once upon a time there was a handsome young man named Cinderella. He had to do all the hard work around the house. One day he was sitting by the fire feeling sad for himself and his fairy godfather appeared. His godfather granted him three wishes of whatever he wanted.

It took Cinderella a long time to figure out what he wanted to wish for because he had been down and out for such a long time. But then he came up with three great wishes. His first wish was a race car. His second wish was for ten trillion dollars. For his last wish, he wanted to GET AWAY FROM HOME!

Then his fairy godfather granted

"Oh" she muttered. In frustration she kicked the pony in the side. All of a sudden the pony shot forward at a full gallop! "Help," shouted Kate. Suddenly a stranger appeared. He was about 22 years old. He burst in to a run next to the pony. Just as he was about to be left behind, he jumped up into the saddle behind Kate. He grabbed the reins and pulled the pony to a stop. "Thank you so much," gasped Kate. "That's ok," said the stranger. "I'll take you home now." Halfway home they were met by Kate's mother. "Thank goodness you're ok," she cried. "I was thanks to him," Kate pointed to the stranger still on the pony.

"Thank you," her mother said gratefully.

"No problem."

"Come in and eat some lunch with us. You deserve a reward of some kind."

"I don't want a reward ma'am," the stranger said. "I was glad to help." From that day on Kate's mother taught Kate to ride. With the help of the stranger. His name was Rick Hunter. When she was 19 years old, Kate won a gold medal and a trophy in a horse contest.

said, "Play A and try to get it right."

The QB said, "Hike," and Speedy rushes down the field and takes a quick turn and gets the pass and takes it to the 23 yard line and gets the first down. Other plays passed and the 49er's scored a touchdown. After the first quarter the score was tied 7-7. After the second quarter the score was 26-14, the 49er's were wasting the Lions. After the third quarter the score was 32-22, the Lions made a great come back. There was 1:30 left to go, the Lions have the ball and it was two down, the next plays would have to be good ones. They try to hand it off to Bo but he gets tackled at the 3. The QB said, "Ok, Speedy go in to the end zone." "Ok," said Speedy. Speedy goes in to the end zone, he fakes to the left and goes right, gets the pass and wins the game. A few years later Speedy broke a lot of records and became a millionaire.

bed. The man was dressed up like her grandma. "Come here little Red," the man said. Red went to her grandma's bed where the man was.

"What little hair you have grandma," said Red.

"The better to see you with," said the man.

"What big hands you have," said Red.

"The better to grab you with." He chased little Red around the room. Then Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles came and saved her.

him his wishes in a very strange way. Rather than just giving Cinderella these things, he sent him to a ball to meet a very beautiful princess named Windmere. Cinderella won her heart and her father let them marry. They and their son lived happily ever after in the King's biggest castle on the island of Bermada.

It Didn't Work

One cold and lonely evening, Rebecca Mane was sitting in front of the fire in the fireplace that was almost out. Rebecca was 11 1/2 years old and home by herself until her sister gets home tomorrow around 12 noon. Her parents were away on vacation and her four brothers and sister were away at college. Her sister, Tanya, 23, was coming home long enough to pack her sister's clothes, and then pick her up from school, then Tanya was going to take Rebecca with her, because their parents won't be back for several months. So Rebecca was freezing because there was no fire wood for the fire. She knew that her sister really didn't like this town especially at night. "It's alright Muff-er," she said.

"Purrrrr." Muff-er replied. "Well might as well go upstairs and start dinner. Come on Muff-Muff." Well when she got upstairs she heard a strange noise outside, but she really didn't think that anybody would be prowling around outside in the dark. She turned on the radio and immediately heard,

"Murderer on the loose, murderer on the loose. Lock your doors and your windows," replied the man on the radio. Then a song started and she turned the radio off. Rebecca thought nothing of it, that the strange noise outside could have been the killer, and just went on making her dinner. She

Meg was looking out the window wondering "what the day's gonna be like." She was peeling the wood off the window sill as the mail came by. She ran outside, got the mail, and gasped as she saw a letter to her. She ran right past her horse Gomery and forgot to pet him. She flung open the door and as she was sitting down a picture fluttered out of the envelope. She looked at the picture closely and noticed that the picture looked just like her. She gave a laughing sigh knowing it was just a prank. Then she decided to open the letter. She opened the letter and read:

Dear Meg,
You may not believe this but I'm your twin sister. I just found out today. I live in Traverse City, MI. My address is on the front of the envelope. Please come and meet me at Cadillac at 12:00 and don't be late. Please

Will I Ever See Her Again?

Carla looked out the window of her bright sunny bedroom and felt the soft blue carpet through her toes. She walked into the next room to check to see if her parents were gone. She felt she was being drawn in to her parent's room. They didn't look or act like her at all. She opened her mother's bureau drawer to see a large yellow envelope, and pulled out the paper. She didn't understand why her parents had hid the envelope from her when she was little. But she found it. She originally found the envelope when she was little, but now she had a feeling that it hid her parent's secret. She read the paper inside. She read that her parents had been killed in a car accident when she was three years old. She read also that she had an identical twin! "Will I ever see her again?" she thought. She also learned that her twin lived in a town not far from hers. She angrily put the letter back in the envelope, and slid it back in the drawer and slammed it shut. She scribbled on a note pad that she was spending the weekend at a friend's house. She then went into her room and slammed the door. She grabbed a piece of pink stationary, and began to write a note to her twin. She picked it up and sat down and finished the letter. The note explained the situation. She was very excited. She wanted very much to scream at her so called foster parents. She packed food and water and then went to her barn in her backyard, to get her Arabian horse, Jake. She put on Jake's saddle and harness and prepared him for the long journey ahead, to meet her twin at the Burger King in Cadillac. She filled her leather saddle bag with extra clothes. She put on her soft hair tie that pulled back her long thigh length blonde hair and braided it. Then she started riding down a trail towards Cadillac. She knew all of the trails for hundreds of miles around. She rode as far as she could in the daylight. She only made it about 15 miles because it was dark outside. They soon got to an old abandoned cabin in the woods. The cabin was so old that she brought Jake right inside with her. She filled up his pan with water from the red hand pump outside the cabin, and filled another pan with oats she had also brought in her saddlebag. The next day she got the rest of the way to Cadillac and stayed in a cabin about a mile outside of Cadillac, put Jake in, and barred it shut so no one could harm her horse. She walked to Burger King, her long beautiful hair flowing behind her. She was wearing a pair of saddle boots, and she had a leather vest on and a soft pink shirt, and a pair of bleached worn burtle boy jeans. She looked very pretty. She finally got to Burger King, and she walked inside. There sitting was a girl that looked just like her wearing a similar outfit. She nervously sat down. "Hi!" she said. "Is your name Meg?" They spent the next few hours talking about their being twins.

"I know I locked all the doors and windows when that man on the radio said to lock everything in the house," said Rebecca out loud, then she locked it. She turned on the 11 o'clock news.

"Several people have spotted 'the slayer' around Fisher Lane way back in the woods around the Manes' property," said the news reporter.

"Hey, that's our house and property." Then she went off day-dreaming about what could happen to her. She picked up the phone and dialed 6-4-8-3-9-1-0.

"Hello?" sleepily replied the person at the other end of the line.

"Hello, Aunt Freida," replied Rebecca, "that slayer dude has been spotted on our property. What should I do? I heard a strange sound out in don't tell anyone and just meet me there on Monday. I will be riding my horse Jake. Please just come. We will meet at Burger King.

P.S. I'll explain when I get there.

Your sister,
Carla

I read it over and over and I had a bunch of questions but I couldn't think. A day passed and I started packing my bags. I told my parents that I would be spending three days with my friends. I read the letter over a couple of times, loaded my horse, and took off. In a couple of hours I met her. We were talking about being twins and Carla told me what had happened and how she found out. Then Meg decided to live with Carla. They lived happily ever after.

Epilogue: Meg stayed at Carla's house because they did not want to be separated.

front of the kitchen around 5:30 p.m. and I know it or he or she isn't in the house, because we have that alarm system and it hasn't gone off. Even if it went off while I was sleeping I would have heard it, it's so loud!"

"Slow down honey, I know what your going through. Now are all your doors and window locked?" she asked.

"Yes."

"I want you to go around your house and turn on all the lights. Then I want you to turn on all the T.V.'s and the radio's as loud as possible. Okay?" asked Aunt Freida.

"Okay, but can I set the phone down so I can go get the cordless one?" she asked.

"Yes, but hurry." Time went on and they talked constantly for hours. "You have to go to school now Rebecca," her aunt said in a different tone of voice. Different than usual. Kind of like, well a worried voice.

"But I don't want to," protested Rebecca, "I'm afraid he might kill me."

"Okay then I'll come over there and," she couldn't finish.

"And what?" cried Rebecca, "risk your life for mine. No way, I'll risk my own life. You aren't coming out here. No way, no how, and no can do."

"Then I'll call the cops. Okay I want you to go down into the basement and I'll tell you what to do." Aunt Freida replied. Time went on and Rebecca now knew what to do and she knew she had to move quickly. The police also knew the plan. Okay, she thought to herself, the police are here, now I have to let the slayer in, run to the den, get outside, lock the door from the outside, then rush around front, lock that door, and I'm safe, I hope.

"Yo," she called, "I've finally decided to let you in the house."

"Thank the lord," started the slayer, "it's cold enough out here." In the meantime Rebecca unlocked the door, and tried to run to the den, but unfortunately she couldn't get there in time. The slayer got her, killed her, and fled. By this time her sister had gotten there and was worried to death about her. When she didn't come out of the house, the police also got worried. So they went in the house. What a terrible sight. Rebecca. Dead.

"We're terribly sorry," started the Chief of Police, "but your sister is dead." Tears went everywhere. As the days went on, they called her parents and her brothers, had the funeral, and continued with their own lives.

They no longer own that house and property way back in the forest on Fisher Lane. They do however have a house in town on a very populated road.

When Rusty Argue came to our class he gave Mrs. Johnson some flowers. He said, "Is there any questions?" And everybody raised their hands. Somebody asked if he got sea sick. He said, "Yes." Also on the ship they had three machine guns and twelve missiles. Somebody asked if anybody got bit by a shark. He said, "No." Andy asked if he drove the ship at all. He said, "No." Rusty said that they played cards and things like that. After all the questions were done he gave us some tootsie-rolls. We all said, "Thanks."

Verse or Worse

By Joe Murphy

The Grand Old Man Of Grayling

He is up and going while the rest of us sleep
He starts early to get his days work done
So he can join his friends when they come in
For he always enjoys a little fun

Now this man puts in a lot of hours
But he always makes a world of dough
Which he turns into those goodies by Goodale
So people can have their breakfast on the go

For a bag of Goodale's goodies
And a big cup of that coffee they have there
Is what the working man needs in the morning
If he is going to pitch in and do his share

The folks that gather at Goodale's in the morning
The grand old man greets with a friendly smile
That's especially true with the ladies
For they all like that old man's style

He always has a friendly word
To kind of brighten up your day
Everyone leaves with a lighter heart
For that is just that great man's way

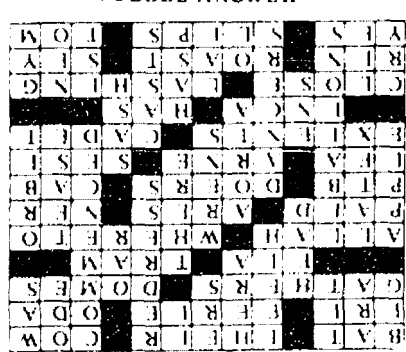

Mr. Goodale, we hope you live forever
And we want to thank you for the job you do
This world would be a much nicer place
If there were a lot more folks like you

Resource Review

By Bruce Patrick DNR Officer

Bear hunting in 1991 will again be under a zones and quota system. The state is divided into eight management units, seven in the Upper Peninsula and one in the Lower. These units are large and support bear populations that produce an annual surplus of animals. A harvest quota for each unit was developed based on previous years' harvest information, input from DNR field personnel, and hunter observations.

Locally, the Red Oak Bear Management Unit encompasses most of the Lower Peninsula north of Gladwin. There will be a total of 1000 permits issued for this unit, valid for two hunting periods. The first hunt is September 21-27 for firearms or bows. The second hunt, October 5-11, is archery only. Use of dogs is allowed only during the first hunting period.

Applications for permits are available at most license agents. Senior citizen hunting license holders can get applications at no cost from most DNR offices. The application deadline is June 15, with successful applicants being notified by July 1.

Restrictions on bait stations and use of dogs are similar to last year. In the Red Oak Unit, no bait stations are to be established prior to September 7 and are not to be tended or established after October 11. Bait is to be on the ground and cannot contain any plastic, wood products, paper, fabric, etc. All containers used to transport bait must be disposed of properly. No litter. Only three bait stations per licensed hunter are allowed.

A special permit, available at DNR offices, is needed to use dogs when hunting bear.

Each person participating in any way in pursuing bear with dogs must have a valid bear license. Unsuccessful applicants who wish may purchase a Participation License which allows them to take part in the hunt, but does not allow them to carry any kind of a weapon.

A preference process is included in the selection process. Seventy-five percent of this year's bear licenses will be set aside for first time applicants and for last year's unsuccessful applicants. This is an effort to insure fair distribution of hunting privileges.

I would like to remind you of two things. First of all, this month's "Friends" group meeting will be held on May 23, at the Park Headquarters at 7:30 p.m. The revised, and as far as we know, final floor plan for the Visitor Center is now in our hands and will be available for you to look at if you are interested.

Second, keep in mind that a vehicle permit is required wherever you are in the park. A vehicle permit is required if you fish Bright and Glory lakes or the East Branch. If you use the Scenic Trail, a vehicle permit is required just as it is for picnic or campground users.

Vehicle permits are available at the Park Headquarters or the Contact Station (summer office) from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily. An annual vehicle permit is $15, and a daily vehicle permit is $3. Either permit is good for vehicle entry into any State Park or Recreation Area. The annual is valid until December 31, 1991, whereas the daily is good for vehicle entry for only one day.

The Bible Speaks

From The
Calvary Baptist Church

Changing American Culture

Since prayer and Bible reading were legislated out of the classrooms by judicial review, American culture has been adrift from her anchor. today a majority of our universities are limiting the most important freedom we possess, the freedom of speech. in the name of censoring intolerance, racism, ethnocentrism, sexism, ableism, heterosexism, lookism, and a host of other "evils" blamed on our western Judeo-Christian roots, formal speech codes as well as unwritten rules forbid certain language on many campuses.

The U.S. News and World Report has stated that this censorship of intolerance is based upon that which is being considered "politically correct" or not "politically correct." When this operated first in the religious field, it was judged by that which is "loving," "positive," and "ecumenical." Those who did not cooperate were condemned as "bigoted, self-righteous judges." We were ridiculed as "ignorant, wild-eyed radicals and narrow extremists."

Today the "politically correct" subjects include, "affirmative action, busing, gay rights, women's studies, the PLO, animal rights, bilingualism, self-segregation of blacks on campus and censorship in the pursuit of tolerance." That not "politically correct" is listed as "The SAT, doubts about abortion, Catholics, wearing fur, any emphasis on standards or excellence, and any suggestion that gender and ethnicity might not be the most overwhelmingly important issues of the modern era."

The real "enemy" is the entire Judeo-Christian western culture which is being branded as "racist," "bigoted," "prejudiced," and "evil." The National Council of Churches has gone so far as to brand Columbus as part of the starting problem with American culture. Jesse Jackson chanted with hundreds at Stanford, "Hey, Hey, Ho, Ho, Western culture's got to go." At Harvard, the Office of Race Relations and Minority Affairs prohibited parties expressing nostalgia for the 1950's "because there was racism in that time period."

God and the Bible are the foundation of all our rights and liberties in the western culture. While all of us are sinners, some of us are not ready to condemn our Holy God, His Holy Scriptures, our American republic, nor our founding forefathers who gave birth to this great nation! We will not be censored in the name of tolerance, political correctness, religious brotherhood, or any other form of "doublespeak." "Woe unto them that call evil good, that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!" (Isaiah 5:20). We must stand for God and good, and against Satan and evil! This is a moral obligation greater than life, liberty, or honor!

Church Directory

A grassy field in Gettysburg, muddy trenches slithering through European soil, a stretch of beach in Normandy, the dense and rugged terrain of Korea; the steaming jungles in Vietnam; the arid deserts of the Middle East... all soil consecrated by the blood of those who died for democracy. Abraham Lincoln expressed it so eloquently: "We cannot hallow this ground. The brave men (and women)... who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract."

However we choose to commemorate this significant day, may the offering of prayers for a world united by peace and love be our living memorial.

"Turn ye even to me with your heart... and with weeping, and with mourning... and turn unto the Lord your God: for he is gracious and merciful."

Joel 2:12-13

While construction is underway, the dam area will be fenced off. Casey cautioned that the area could be dangerous to children and they should not play around the construction site.

Property owners can call the DNR

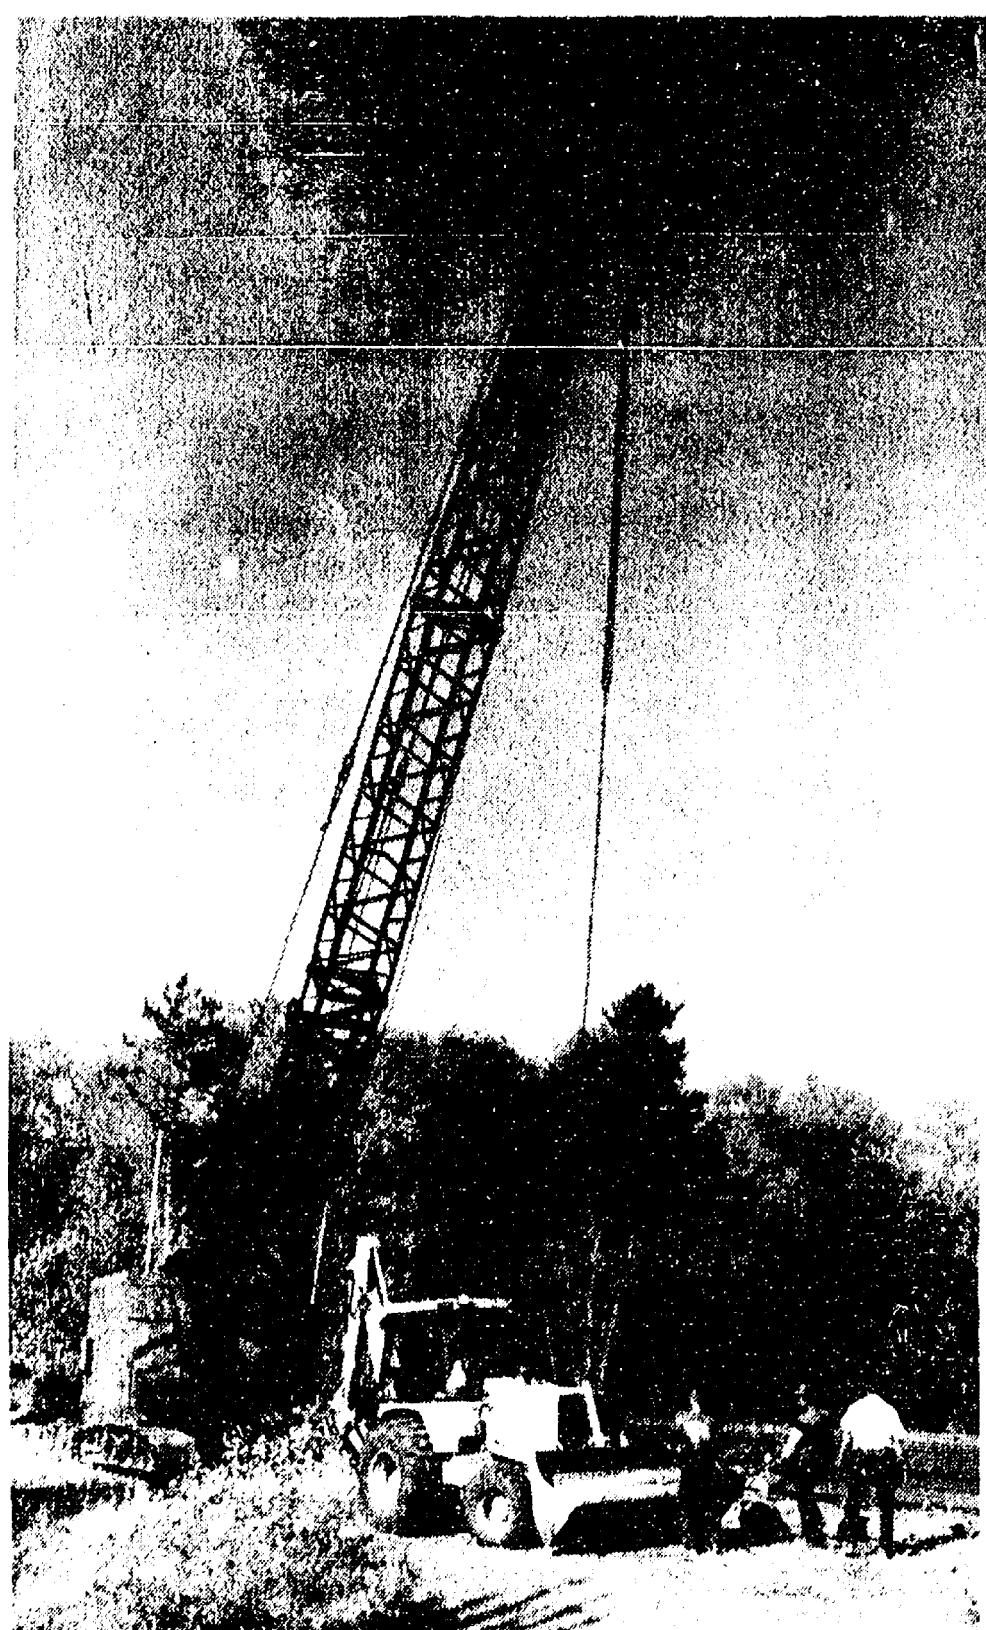

Grayling office with questions. Later on, the DNR hopes to gather a group of experts to be able to answer questions about growing vegetation on the reclaimed land and other questions.

various meetings and councils in the four county area.

The Children's Program is still dependent upon volunteer assistance, particularly the support groups. The Crawford County group, which is held in the evening, has the largest attendance with as many as 24 children at one session. With summer just around the corner, the shelter staff anticipate a similar number of children attending the daytime group meetings in the other three counties.

River House Shelter is a non-profit agency providing crisis intervention services for domestic violence victims from Crawford, Oscoda, Ogemaw, and Roscommon counties. Individuals who are interested in volunteering time and talents to the Children's Program should call the business line, (517) 348-3169, for further information. The twenty-four hour crisis line number is (517) 348-8972 and collect calls are accepted.
